Agnieszka Garstecka, Tadeusz Pietrykowski, Stanisław Betlejewski

Summary

Cyst is a pathological cavity which is surrounded by capsule and filled with matter of different compactness and composition. Cysts may originate in bones and in soft tissues. We are describing the case of the follicular cyst of the mandibula diagnosed for a 55 years old female patient. After diagnosis based on clinical, laryngological examination, computer-ized tomography, amber-coloured fluid in aspiration biopsy, the cyst and the unerupted tooth were surgically removed. Now the patient is under laryngological care.
